But in this case for a full-fledged game they has no enough combat forces, because both the bishops don't have realistic prospects. 15.Rc1 h6 16.Nf3 Be6 17.Nd2

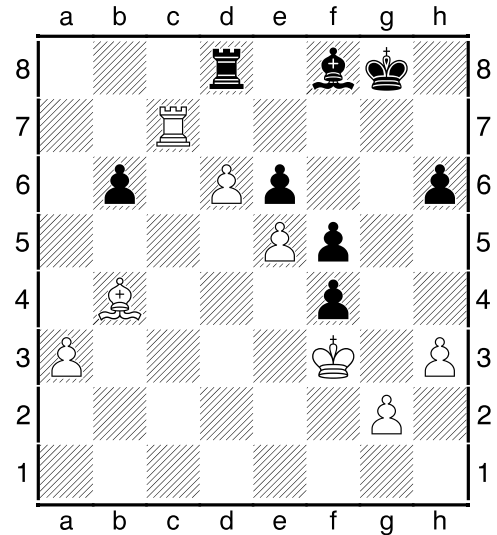

White embarking on the implementation of the basic plan – taran f2–f4–f5. In case of opening the line "g" the Queen will receive at the disposal the outpost h5, and pawn h6 will be the real object of attack. This was the sense of white's 13–th move. 17...Rad8 18.f4 Nc4 19.Nxc4 dxc4 20.Be4 f5 A forced measure. Black need a breath of air. 21.Bf3

The opening testifies to the particular and careful preparation of the white. Obviously, black planning to pawn undermining c7–c6, b7–b5. The knight on the c3 would be out of business, that's why the white apply offbeat development of the pieces, which allows them to meet any movement of the opponent. 7...c6 8.Rc1 b5 9.b3 Nbd7 10.Nh3! And this knight has excellent prospects... 10...e5 11.d5 cxd5 12.cxd5
